23. Title of proposed research project

24. Purpose of visit

The Visiting Scholars program is designed for scholars seeking to undertake independent research, while drawing on the guidance of Columbia faculty sponsors or other academic resources as available. It is not suitable for those proposing “collaborative research” with Columbia faculty.

Do you plan to engage in any “collaborative research” with Columbia faculty? (Y/N)

25. Please specify any other Columbia Law School programs to which you also plan to apply:

E.g., Edwards Fellowship, Center for European Legal Studies, Human Rights Institute.

Important: If you are applying for an Edwards Fellowship, please be sure to complete the Edwards Fellowship Addendum in Section VII.

26. Brief summary of your research proposal

In addition to this summary, please be sure to submit a copy of your full proposal with this form.
27. Proposed Columbia Law School sponsor (if applicable)

Visiting Scholars may, in some cases, be invited with the sponsorship of a Columbia Law School faculty member, Center, or Institute. These sponsors agree to provide guidance regarding a visitor’s research, but applicants should be aware that the extent of such consultation may be limited. It is the responsibility of prospective visitors who may require closer consultation to determine, before arriving at the Law School, that their expectations for guidance match those of their particular sponsor.

Visiting Scholars who do not wish, or are unable, to secure a sponsor may in some cases be sponsored by the Office of International Programs on an “independent” basis. Participation in the Visiting Scholars program on an “independent” basis is not generally appropriate for those requiring guidance from Columbia faculty, whose own research commitments may make it impossible for them to engage with visitors.

If you would like to be considered for sponsorship, please propose between one and three faculty members, Centers or Institutes with academic specializations that correspond with your own. Candidates who do not propose a sponsor are less likely to receive an invitation.

You are not responsible for contacting prospective sponsors directly to ask their agreement. The Office of International Programs will contact them on your behalf after receiving your application.
